LONGLINE FISHING

Fishing trips typically last up to 2 months. The catch is blast frozen on board and typically adds up to 25 tons.

Anova carefully sources from vessels that use circle hooks and have been trained in handling accidental by-catch. Shark finning is banned on all vessels.

A long main line is set in the water at dawn. Branch lines with baited hooks are suspended at intervals. When it is time to retrieve the fish, the main line is pulled back onto the vessel mechanically.

Longline fishing takes place in the Pacific Ocean where Yellowfin tuna stocks are healthy.

Longline fishing is highly selective, targeting only large adult tunas that swim deeper in the water column.

All longline vessels are registered and controlled at every unloading. Captains fill in logbooks and captain statements.
